Dr. Juan Marques Rodrigues

MD, FACC, FESC, Cardiologist, Professor of Experimental Cardiology

Dr. Juan Alberto Marques Rodrigues is a seasoned executive and thought leader in the pharmaceutical industry, blending deep scientific expertise with strategic foresight. Trained in cardiology and pharmaceutical medicine, he brings a rare combination of clinical authority and business acumen to drive innovation and transformation.

He has held senior medical roles at Organon, MSD, Novartis, Pfizer, and Sanofi, leading cross-regional strategies and championing innovation across Latin America, Europe, and Canada. His core competencies span clinical research, medical education, pharmacoeconomics, and digital health—with a strong emphasis on team leadership and operational excellence.

An accomplished academic and published researcher, Dr. Marques serves as Professor in the Experimental Cardiology Section at the Central University of Venezuela. He is Vice-President of the International Institute of Bioethics and a board member of the Medicines Affordability & Adherence Alliance. Deeply committed to mentorship and emotional intelligence, he is passionate about shaping future leaders and aligning scientific rigor with strategic impact to improve patient outcomes. His contributions have earned multiple honors, including the Order of Merit – Commander Rank, awarded by the Portuguese Government.
